

Face-to-Face

As well as our catalogue of short, sharp Bitesize & Masterclass workshops, Eliesha offers a comprehensive collection of one-day and multi-day face-to-face programmes of learning and development. Programmes such as these can help to bring about more substantial and sustainable changes in knowledge, skills and behaviour.

In this digital age, with increasing amounts of communication occurring digitally and virtually, face-to-face training interventions are still an extremely powerful development tool and preferred delivery intervention, within a blended learning model.

Face-to-face delivery has proven and strong foundations for driving development and delivering change. There are significant benefits deriving from professionally facilitated and interactive learning sessions. Trainers are better able to implement strategies to keep learners involved and engaged, maintain attention, support retention and encourage results. In the classroom-based learning environment, the trainer can adapt to learner needs, learning styles can be accommodated and the benefits of networking, learner-learner and learner-trainer dynamics can be harnessed and leveraged for improved learning outcomes. Effective communication – including tone, language, questioning, responses and reactions – and facilitated, purposeful exchanges ensure that there is a rich learning experience. Quality is further enhanced through professional discussion, debate, challenge, reflection and personal action planning.

If required, in support of the drive for increased professional skills, programmes of learning can be designed and delivered within an appropriate accredited and qualification framework.
